

Federal Results and Analysis

After a highly charged election, Trump's victory signals a new direction in Washington. Trump will have to work with Congress to pass legislation but the expectation is that many of the current administration's Executive Orders and legislation will be under review. First 100 days is critical in setting tone for country moving forward. Republicans enjoy a majority in both the House and the Senate. There were no changes in Colorado's delegation –with incumbents comfortably winning in all races.

Colorado General Assembly looks to remain a divided affair and our political landscape has not changed much. House will be under control of the Democrats, (37-28 a gain of 3 seats) and the Senate will remain in control of the Republicans by one vote (18-17). This balanced legislature will again consider a number of challenging policy issues facing Colorado, including transportation and budget fights.

For the 2016 cycle, GreenCO made strategic contributions to candidates in 17 races who have been supportive of our legislative efforts in the past and to candidates we'd like to continue building relationships with. Twelve of the 17 were elected and GreenCO will be working with during the 2017 Session.

Colorado State Senate

It was a crazy race to 18 for the Republicans in 2016. There will be only two brand-new faces in the 35member Senate, Democrat Stephen Fenberg from Boulder County and Republican Jim Smallwood of Douglas County. Democrat Rachel Zenzinger, who served one session as an appointee, appears to won her Jeffco seat from incumbent Republican Laura Woods. Seven House members are moving to the Senate chambers, including Democrats Lois Court, Rhonda Fields, Daniel Kagan, Dominick Moreno and Angela Williams. Republican Kevin Priola is making the move, as is Bob Gardner, a former House member who's been out of the Capitol for a couple of years.

Although they were able to maintain the one vote margin they lost the very seat that gave them the majority in the 2014 election. Kevin Priola (R) was able to win his election that was currently held by the democrats for many years. Kevin Grantham (R) looks to be the next President of the Senate and Lucia Guzman (D) will remain the Minority Leader. Due to a number of new faces the committees will look a bit different and GreenCO should be looking to meet with the chairs and vice chairs of key committees soon after assignments are made.

Colorado State House

The election results and recounts will be finalized in the upcoming weeks. Here are the rest of the newbies in the House (districts in parentheses): Democrats - Adrienne Benavidez (32), Jeff Bridges (3), James Coleman (7), Matt Gray (32), Chris Hansen (6), Leslie Herod (8), Edie Hooton (10), Dominique Jackson (42), Dafna Jenet (30), Chris Kennedy (23), Barbara McLachlan (59), Donald Valdez (62) and Mike Weissman (36). Republicans - Susan Beckman (38), Phil Covarrubias (56), Kimmi Lewis (64), Hugh McKean (51) and Dave Williams (15).

We are confident that the House will elect Rep. Crisanta Duran (D) to be the next speaker of the house with Rep. Polly Lawrence (R) to be the next minority leader. With the margin increased in the Democrats favor will their agenda be a moderate one or aggressive knowing that the Senate is under Republican leadership. Once elected speaker is confirmed committee assignments will be set and will be sent out an update. At that time, we will start setting meetings to discuss GreenCO agenda prior to session starting.
